KAMINSKY ELECTED
PRESIDENT OF UNIT

Closer Contact Between
City Hall and Public
Is Expected

Steps were under way today for the building of a permanent civic organization composed of representatives of varied groups of the city, which will function in the capacity of a mayor's conference committee.

Following a series of meetings during the last two months at which plans and objectives of the proposed organization were discussed, the committee today came into existence officially with the election of officers.

Kaminsky President

They are: President, C. W. Kaminsky; vice president, James Wilson; secretary, Mrs. W. F. Bolen. Kaminsky is a representative on the committee of both the Business Bureau and the Kiwanis club. Wilson, the Manufacturers' association, and Mrs. Bolen, the garden club.

The committee to date also includes representation from the Rotary club, the Quota club, the Book club, the Travelers club, city council, the Ministerial association, Presbyterian Men's Bible class.

Pointing out that it was the first time in memory that a mayor had taken the initiative in sponsoring an organization of this type, with the objective of closer contact between the public and city hall for mutual advice and suggestions for the betterment of the city, the committee unanimously chose Mayor George Harroff as honorary president.

City Officials "Sit In"

The mayor and members of his cabinet, including Service Director Paul Wilson, Safety Director C. E. Donahay, Solicitor Lozier Caplan, Council President Charles Connolly and others who may be called upon from time to time, will "sit in" at meetings of the committee, which probably will be held monthly.

"Such a committee," the mayor explained today, "should so function that city officials will receive constructive suggestions, first hand, from groups or individuals vitally interested in civic progress. It should afford city officials a more accurate outlook on public reaction, and at the same time it should give the public an opportunity to more clearly define its own problems and the hardships under which it works at times."

Following the program at the High school about 80 of the young people attended a dance at the K of P hall here. Johnnie Burke's Melody band, which furnished music during the banquet, played for dancing and Eldon Gibbons presented an intermission program of tap dances.

This year's dance after the banquet was the first ever held by the group and proved so successful that the association hopes to repeat it next year.

Since the officers elected for next year live outside of Goshen it will be necessary to elect others to act for them. A meeting of the nominating committee will be held soon, the date to be announced.

Estimates made by veterans' organizations in the city show 500 or more World war veterans will share in the distribution of the soldiers' bonus bonds expected to start in Salem Tuesday morning, June 16.

Post office officials will work all day Monday checking registration numbers, etc., and getting the letters ready for delivery. The bonds, in $50 denominations, will be given to regular city and rural carriers on Tuesday morning for delivery.

The registered letters will be sent to the addressee only and all veterans who are to be recipients of the bonus bonds have been requested to make every effort to contact the postman personally. No other person will be allowed to accept the registered bonus letter.

NO LONGER FUNNY

It will take a few days for the country to get over the idea that Rep. Zionscheck of Seattle, Wash., is a funnyman. For many weeks he has been the pepper in the news.

Washington, according to reports, has been as interested in his antics as in the tax bill, the political situation and other important matters. The representative's adventures have kept the capital in stitches.

There is, however, a vital difference between a man who does relatively harmless things in a spirit of mischief and one who consistently engages in peculiar antics which, apparently, are beyond his control.

As this is written, Rep. Zionscheck is resting in the psychopathic ward of a Washington hospital. Physicians explain his condition is not serious, but for some unknown reason give their assertion the lie by saying he is "suffering from overwork."

The public can be most unkind to those who, like Rep. Zionscheck, give it an opportunity to laugh at them, instead of with them. The unkindest thing that could happen now would be continuation of the attitude that irresponsibility in a man who seemingly cannot be responsible is a laughing matter.

HUMILITY

Americans, in all probability, will be able to take their tennis defeat by Australia in the American zone Davis cup matches without losing much sleep. It may as well be admitted however that things are getting serious.

Germany is rubbing it in by proving it can build and fly airships better than the United States. Great Britain and France, not to mention Italy and Germany, have been flaunting their super-ocean liners in Uncle Sam's chagrined presence.

The prospect for American success in the Olympic games is none too bright. The Japanese even are beginning to play a pretty decent game of baseball. One of these days some foreign nation will turn out a football team that can beat Minnesota and Notre Dame on consecutive days.

Humility doesn't come naturally to this country. It needs an outlet for its pride. If international competition is going to be the rule, Uncle Sam must find something in which he can excel. He used to be a whizz at tennis, but that's all over now.

Possibly ping pong or horseshoes would puzzle the foreigners for a year or two, if they could be coaxed to try their hand at them.

INFINITE POSSIBILITIES

The sit-down strike idea has been sweeping the United States, possibly bringing cheer to clothing manufacturers. But it is not the only form which passive resistance is taking.

In France, workers favor the crossed arm strike. Instead of sitting down to await developments, they fold their arms. It isn't as comfortable, but it is symbolically useful.

There are infinite possibilities of striking postures. There could be standing on one leg strikes, for instance. There could be bowed head strikes, closed eye strikes. There could be leaning strikes and hands in pocket strikes. A few years ago, Mahatma Gandhi's passive resisters in India tried lying down with fair success.

But sitting down seems to have an edge on all the other possibilities. When men cease to work, they invariably adopt a posture of relaxation. Sitting down is by all odds the most favored posture. Lying down has an unpleasant connotation of servility.

Once more, Americans have demonstrated their practical nature.

O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, June 2—Ernest Hemingway has made a literary Mecca of the most difficult city in America to reach—Key West, Florida. Editors, writers and aspiring farmers arrive daily to consult, receive advice and pay tribute to one of the foremost figures in letters.

Hemingway has established himself at this tip end of the map almost permanently, staying until July or even August before moving north. Since the hurricane a year ago demolished the Florida East Coast railroad, the only means of traveling to Key West, unless by motor, is by bus or airplane.

The bus trip takes an entire day from Miami. Flying takes an hour. To go by boat from Miami, one must first go to Havana and then over to Key West, which takes a couple of days. Hemingway has the most beautiful house and grounds in a town gangrened with decay and struggling to master its calamities.

His home is a block or two back from the water and occupies a city square. Smothered in huge palms it is more than 100 years old, of Spanish Colonial type with two-story porches around all sides. The ceilings are 15 feet high and the floors are of oak plank and Spanish tiles.

Mrs. Hemingway, who was Pauline Pfeiffer, was one of the editors of Vogue several years ago. She furnished the house fittingly with Spanish antiques.

At strategic points on the walls various heads of the animals shot by the Hemingways on their African safari have been strikingly mounted.

So many authors arrive to see Hemingway he has evolved a regular routine for the social graces. These start off with a fishing trip on board the Pilar, his 40-foot fishing launch. They get started before 10 in the morning. Hemingway meeting his guests at the wharf. If the guests are good sailors they are taken out into the gulf stream to angle for large fish but if they prefer he will meander among the coral keys where the waters are placid. However, he and his two-men crew always manage to land fish for guests, because he knows every inch of the waters for miles around. It is, of course, because of the fish he lives there.

At noon several of the catches are superbly prepared by the native Spanish cook aboard and it turns out to be something for lip smacking, replete with fine Spanish wines and liquors. Hemingway is a sparkling conversationalist when the mood is on. The Hemingways often entertain visitors in their home and their grilled pompano with Spanish sauce is a high alp in cookery.

With great regularity, however, Hemingway writes from early in the morning until lunch and refuses to be disturbed. His studio is on the second floor of an outbuilding which once served as slave quarters. He reaches this by a bridge swung from the second floor balcony over to the studio. This is a large square room, lined with bookcases to the ceiling and containing only a flat top desk and chair. No other furniture, but the floors are strewn with skins of lions and tigers shot in Africa.

Hemingway is easily Key West's first citizen, and everybody in town knows where he lives and all about him. He is popular with the townsfolk and mixes with them freely. He detests formal society and ducks the conventional colonies that revolve around the winter hotels. He'd much rather line up against the bar and spin tall tales, and does very often. Like all hunters he has a talent for the anecdote.

At the moment he is working on a Bravura dealing with the contemporary scene, and that is all anyone knows about it, because Hemingway says that if he talks about a story to anyone the desire to write it disappears. Those who have seen some of his recently completed short stories say his work is more distinguished than ever. Despite his outdoor-siness and zest for lion and elephant hunts and excitements of the bull ring, he has become quite domestic and is a great pal of his three boys, ranging in age from four to twelve.

Hemingway, leading the life of the fabulous Riley, shows what so often happens when a writer, indeed a worker in any line, blazes a trail with something New. And it must not be forgotten it was a long trek with lean, starving days—days in shabby Paris pensions and days without hope!

THE STARS SAY

For Thursday, June 4

A day of rather unorthodox, unusual or intriguing adventures, with much stirring in business as well as in private life, is presaged from the predominant planetary auspices. Rather peculiar situations may arise, with behind-the-scenes situations to be fathomed and judiciously managed and disposed of.

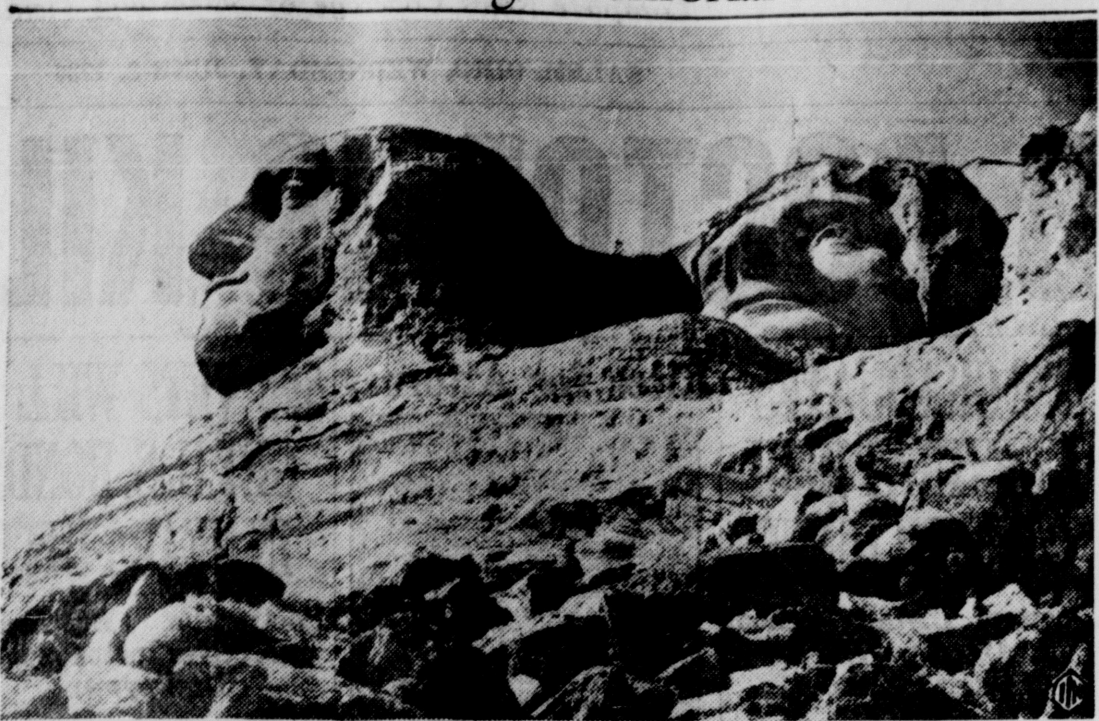

Private correspondence may assist in this, but be cautious in all matters calling for signature, as there are hints of distortion, misrepresentation or suspicion. Elders benefit and there are arguments for much social and romantic pleasure and activity.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by an intriguing and interesting year with much occurring of a peculiar, singular or romantic character. This in business as well as private life, which will be particularly active and pleasant. Correspondence and writings figure prominently but be cautious in signing papers. All elderly persons, as well as young ones, enhance the festivities and happiness.

A child born on this day may be clever, versatile and cultured, and should shine in society or in literature.

Renew Work on Huge Memorial in Black Hills

A Review of the Day's News

—By Arthur Brisbane

THE HUGE liner Queen Mary, British, of course, more than 1,000 feet long, finished her first trans-Atlantic trip somewhat behind the record of her French rival, the Normandie. The captain of Queen Mary said she delayed her. She expects to beat the Normandie. The Normandie naturally expects the contrary.

UNCLE SAM looks on and wonders how other nations manage to build such magnificent steamers and how Germany can build dirigibles that keep on flying.

"Wondering" is Uncle Sam's occupation just now.

QUEEN MARY has one feature that may rouse the noble ire of extreme radicals. On the sports deck a dog hotel, with 26 rooms, has hot and cold water in each room, trained attendants to walk the dogs, brush them and feed them according to dietary principles.

It should comfort the radical to remember that, with all this luxury, the dogs are still dogs, just as man who thinks he can change the world, overnight, is, after all his talking, still a goose.

of the great British war base a joke, as far as Japan is concerned

A PROPOSITION more interesting to the United States may be heard from later. It has to do with a ship canal through Mexico, at its narrowest point between the Gulf and the Pacific, the canal opening on the west into the Gulf of Tehuantepec. Mexican and United States engineers declare the plan feasible, with unusually high locks. Such a canal would cut one thousand miles off the distance between New York and our Pacific coast ports. Two thousand miles on the round trip to our west coast would be worth saving.

THE FORMER manager of the late Huey Long was in New York recently planning a meeting of the Rev. G. K. Smith, successor to Senator Long as head of the "Share-the-Wealth" movement. Dr. Townsend, father of the $200-a-month old-age pension plan, and the Rev. Father Coughlin of Detroit. It was announced that Dr. Townsend and the Rev. Mr. Smith would unite "to get rid of Roosevelt." As this was written Monday afternoon, Dr. Coughlin had not made any definite statement.

THE UNITED STATES Supreme court Monday declared unconstitutional a New York state law that would permit New York to fix a minimum wage for women and children.

Chief Justice Hughes, who did not agree with the majority opinion, wrote:

"I find nothing in the Federal Constitution which denies to the state the power to protect women from being exploited by overreaching employers."

THERE IS an old saying that "the best way to discourage vice is to make it expensive," and it is pleasing to learn that, in this country, the price of morphine, cause of so much unhappiness, has increased in five years from $12 to $150 an ounce. That is "bad news" for miserable victims who think deprivation of the drug that controls them worse than death, but it will mean fewer victims in future.

IN THE TIME of De Quincy, opium could be bought at any shop, its frightful danger unknown, its sales unrestricted. It was so cheap that workmen, unable to afford beer, could find the oblivion they sought in two pence worth of opium.

JAPAN informs our state department that Japanese manufacturers sending cotton rugs to the United States agree to continue limitations on shipments. The "limitations" show a substantial Japanese rug business in America—700,000 square yards of chenille rugs; 3,350,000 square yards of hit-and-miss rag rugs; 4,000,000 square yards of rugs, other than those mentioned, all these figures not including Japanese imitation Oriental rugs.

WE SELL them the raw cotton, they sell us the manufactured article, which means selling us so many hours of Japanese labor. This country, while admiring foreign enterprise and efficiency, should endeavor to have American dollars spent for American labor, in spite of the cry, "If we don't buy from them how can they buy from us?" More important is the question: "If we don't buy from our own working people, how are they going to live?"

MAYORS of Arab cities in Palestine warn the British that they must stop Jewish immigration and the sale of land to Jews in Palestine. The British answer to the warning will probably not be satisfactory to the Arabs. It is reported also that "the Central Committee for Palestine of the Communist Party" is distributing literature urging British soldiers in Palestine to mutiny.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

BUERGER'S DISEASE

Many persons enjoy healthy lives without any serious discomfort, while others suffer from various ailments. It is probable that hereditary and constitutional factors influence both health and the span of life.

For example, disorders of the circulation are more likely to occur in those who have inherited certain traits. As a rule, poor circulation is encountered in individuals past middle age. Yet at times some persons will reach advanced old age without having any serious disturbances of the circulation, while others suffer from it at an early age.

There are many forms of circulatory disturbances. Either the arteries or the veins may be involved. One of the diseases of the circulation is "thrombo-angiitis obliterans." It is also known as "Buerger's disease," named after the doctor who first discovered the affliction.

Though our knowledge of this disease has greatly increased within recent years, the actual cause of it is still unknown. There is no doubt that heredity plays an important part in the history of this malady. Although it may occur in one of any nationality, it is more commonly found in Hebrews.

The disorder is usually found in young and middle-aged adults. Men have it more frequently than women. The veins and arteries of the legs may be involved, although the disorder sometimes occurs in other portions of the body. The blood vessels become thickened, painful and inflamed. Sometimes a blood clot forms within the vessel. This obstructs the flow of blood and seriously interferes with the nutrition of the part.

As time goes on the patient notices a peculiar numbness and spasmodic attacks of pain in the affected part. As time goes on, infection may follow. This in turn leads to severe and excruciating pain and may end in gangrene, with death of the tissues.

Consult Doctor
One who complains of any marked disturbances of circulation should have a careful physical examination. This is especially true of all those beyond the age of 45. Let me impress upon you the importance of taking proper care of the feet. Callouses, bunions and corns should be given expert attention. Do not neglect scratches and infections of any part of the body. If you are advised to rest in bed make sure you do so. This may be the only means of preventing permanent damage to the circulation. I am often asked whether diet plays a part in disturbances of the circulation. What we eat has much to do with our health. The diet should be simple and nutritious. All fried and greasy foods, salt, pepper, spices, pickles and condiments, as well as tobacco and alcoholic beverages, must be temperately used. Carefully follow your doctor's orders.

"THERE'S MURDER IN THE AIR"

by ROY CHANSLOR

CHAPTER XXXVI

Tyler paused briefly, then re-commissioned Kilrane gave me permission to talk to Nicky Gabriel, Gaudio's youngest brother, alone. I told him the truth. That, as Kilrane phrased it, he was due for the "big rap," murder. That he didn't have a chance of beating it. And I told him that Carlotta had killed his brother.

"I had to prove it to him. I've never seen such an expression of murderous hatred as that which crossed his face then. I think he would have torn her to pieces with his own hands if he could have got on her. Then—" Tyler paused and smiled. "Then I used an old trick I learned in the office of the prosecutor. I judiciously flavored the truth—with lies."

"I told him that Carlotta had deliberately double-crossed them. Believing that she could continue to live in wealth and luxury, that had the effect I'd hoped for, ready to forget his underhand code then—anything to strike her, knowing that with his father dead and himself doomed, there was no one else to avenge him."

"Well, Nicky talked. And this, in essence, is what he told me: At the time that David Moridon was killed, he, Nicky, was living with his mother, who was separated from his father, in New York. They made their home with a sister of his father, a widow with a young daughter. This daughter was Carlotta."

"Gaudio found Chicago too hot for him after the bomb outrage which resulted in the death of his father. He fled to his mother for shelter, leaving his underworld associates to continue the reign of terror against the Moridons."

"Carlotta, although very young, was even then extremely beautiful, and she was like a tigress. Heady with the knife of a too-important lover, ostensibly in defense of her father. She was Gaudio's kind. And although she was his cousin, she married her not long after he came to New York."

"As for her, she fell completely under his domination. He was bold and ruthless, a killer with a price on his head. She obeyed him like a slave. Gaudio changed his name to Jim Gabriel, a name which his wonderful young brother Nicky also adopted. And he made Nicky Carlotta's as Gaudio's, swar with him to find Moridon some day and avenge the deaths of his father and brother, which he laid directly at Moridon's door."

"But Moridon had apparently vanished utterly. Gaudio knew only that he had left Chicago. Daily he searched the newspapers, hoping to find some trace of him, incredulous that a man of Moridon's wealth and position could drop entirely out of sight. And one day he was rewarded. He found a small newspaper story, a story which had somehow found its way past the censor. And he read that James Moridon, former Chicago financier, who had enlisted in the British army and had been badly wounded, was in Spain, recovering from a series of critical operations."

"Gaudio was afraid Moridon would never return, and that he would again lose track of him. He determined to go to Spain and carry out his vengeance. But he was a fugitive from justice; he dared not risk getting a passport, even under his assumed name, because in those days the passport regulations were growing more and more strict. He would have sent Nicky, but Nicky had got into a shooting-scrape and was under indictment for assault—a charge, incidentally, which he subsequently beat."

"Gaudio acted characteristically. He ordered Carlotta, his bride, to go to Moridon and avenge her blood. In spite of her oath, in spite even of his domination over her, she protested, begged. But he was utterly remorseless. She had sworn; she would keep her oath—or else! And at last she promised, and left for Spain."

"There she took the name of Montez to bolster the fiction of her Spanish descent. And there she did find James Moridon. But more important to her story, freedom at last from Gaudio's ruthless dominance. She cultivated Moridon, and when she saw that he was falling in love with her, she decided on a bold stroke."

"She double-crossed Gaudio, married Moridon, got him to change his name, and returned with him, as Mrs. Paul Gordon, certain in her own mind that the new identity and the changed appearance of her husband would insure her a life of wealth and luxury. She was, you see, a complete opportunist. And she made the most of her opportunity."

"For years she acted the role of the loving wife and the comradely step-mother, acted it until it became a part of her. Acted it because it gave her what she had always wanted—luxury, ease and comfort. She was a clever woman, and she won the family."

"Meanwhile Gaudio, as Gabriel, had carried on his fruitless search for Moridon—and he was, you see, a shrewd and powerful racketeer, always keeping his own skirts clean, delegating all his lawless activities to trusted hoodlums, knowing that if he were ever so much as even arrested on a minor charge, it would almost surely mean his identification through fingerprints, as Gaudio, and a return to Chicago to face charges of jail-breaking—and the murder of Mrs. Moridon."

"Then one day he saw Carlotta. She was in her smart, expensive car, with her chauffeur. He recognized her immediately. He had her followed, communicated with her. She was terrified, I imagine, but didn't dare disobey his summons. He dragged the whole story from her. And he had found Moridon at last."

"Grimly he told her that there was only one way she could escape a frightful death. She must carry out his original command: she must keep her oath; she must kill Moridon and avenge the blood of the Gaudios. If she failed—or if she tried to cross him again—nothing could save her."

"She was under his sway again from then on. She agreed to follow his orders, knowing it was actually her only hope of escaping his vengeance. It was she who planted that bomb. When that failed, Gaudio curtly ordered her to proceed into it. That's all there is to say, except this:

"This family has been through too much. There is no need for this story to fill the columns of the newspapers as a nine-day sensation. Carlotta Gaudio is dead by her own hand. I propose that her secret be buried with her. To the public she is now a heroine who saved her family from a fiend."

"In truth, she did save them, even though she was thinking only of herself. Shall we drag this story across the front pages of the world—or shall we let her remain a heroine?"

Gordon raised his face to Tyler. "If only we could!" he murmured. "Then we shall," said Tyler. He moved quickly to the telephone. Nat recognized the number of Manhattan police headquarters. Tyler asked for the reporters' room, then for Doc Crandall, of the Star. "Doc," he said, "this is Dan Tyler. I have an exclusive for you. It's about Carlotta—Mrs. Gordon. Her terrible experiences unbalanced her mind. She has committed suicide." The strains of the violin came to Tyler, faintly, through the door of his room. He stared upward, muscles tensing, then relaxing. The music was soft and sweet, untroubled. Tyler smiled. Quietly he went into the living-room, up the stairs. He opened the door.

Inside her own room, near the windows which overlooked the garden, the blind girl stood, her violin under her small chin. Her great dark eyes were wet with tears. He strode toward her.

"Ruth! Ruth! What's the matter, darling?"

"Shhh," she said. "Shhh!" And she continued to play, softly.

Her father came close to her. "It's just that I'm so—so happy—for Nat," she whispered.

Tyler stared from the window. Beside the fountain which splashed gayly in the warm morning sunshine stood Nat and Doris, seemingly oblivious, locked in each other's arms.

As they stood there, they were suddenly aware, as one, of the music. They raised their faces toward the window, toward the soft and languorous song, a love-song—the same, they both realized instantly, that Ruth had played in the darkness above them on that night which now seemed so long ago, the lovesong which had seemed a benediction.

Landon of Kansas for the nomination for president at the state convention opened for selection of four delegates at large and nomination of candidates for state offices.
Delegates to the state convention selected 24 of the national convention delegates last night and, in addition to the six pledged to Landon, at least seven others indicated they favor the Kansan.
In the election of national convention delegates last night Everett Sanders of Terre Haute, former Republican national chairman, was defeated. He was a candidate for his home district—the sixth.
The convention followed by less than 24 hours the patching up of a rift within the party's state organization. Don B. Irwin of Frankfort, aligned with the faction headed by former United States Senator James E. Watson, resigned as state chairman yesterday and was succeeded by Ivan C. Morgan of Austin. Irwin had been opposed by Ralph F. Gates of Columbia City. The selection of Morgan was a compromise agreement.

Truth Will Out
DUBLIN, Ga., June 3.—J. Lester Jackson is an unopposed candidate for election as Laurens county surveyor on a pledge "to do just as little work as I can."
Jackson made this promise in a published statement in which he also explained he was "persuaded by myself and no one else" in his decision to run.

John D. Going North
ORMOND BEACH, Fla., June 3.—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., rode north by rail today, bound for his Lakewood, N. J., estate after a Florida sojourn of nearly eight months.
The 96-year-old founder of one of the world's largest fortunes left late yesterday. He will be 97 July 8.

Member of "Black" Legion Testifies to "One-Way Ride"

(By Associated Press)

DETROIT, June 3.—Dayton Dean, who confessed he fired the shots that killed Charles A. Poole, young WPA worker a few weeks ago and thus unwittingly exposed the existence of the Black Legion, took the stand over the objections of his counsel at the examination of himself and 12 others today on murder charges, and said a "one way ride" was pre-arranged for Poole.

Dean said Harvey Davis, a "colonel" in the Black Hooded organization, told him:

"It will be best to hang him (Poole)."

Dean, his face haggard and his eyes averted, kept wetting his lips continuously as he told of the meeting of the Black Legion members at which the "punishment" of Poole was decided upon.

Immediately after taking the stand Dean was silent for a moment, and the court asked him if he wanted Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea to question him.

Nodding, Dean said under questioning:

"Davis told me Poole had broken his wife's ribs and blacked her eyes. He said there would be a meeting that night and told me to be there. He said we would take Poole out."

Announcement by Prosecutor McCrea that Dean desired to testify came after the state had completed its presentation and the defense had cross examined Detective Sergeant John Harvill and Detective Charles Meehan in an effort to show that at least seven of the 13 defendants had not agreed to the plan to "punish" Poole.

Washington Co-ed Threatens Official And Goes To Jail

SEATTLE, Wash., June 3.—A University of Washington co-ed was in jail here today, accused of threatening harm with dynamite to Registrar E. R. Stevens, with whom she recently had discussed low grades.

The student, Miss Ruth E. Naughten, 36-year-old junior, was taken into custody at her apartment last night after struggling against two deputy sheriffs.

Deputy Prosecutor John M. Schermer, who filed a complaint charging threat to kill, said the co-ed apparently believed there was a faculty plot to prevent her from completing requirements to become a teacher.

Schermer said Miss Naughten called Stevens on the telephone Monday and said:

"How would you like a stick of dynamite? Three others are going to get it."

William Theile Returns
To Parents After Living On His Own

(By Associated Press)
MAMARONECK, N. Y., June 3.—Reunited with his parents after living by his wits for a month, 15-year-old William Webster Theile today began making plans for the future.

His financier father, William Theile, left it up to the boy to decide what he wants to do.

"I want the boy to make up his mind," the financier said, as he and Mrs. Theile welcomed the youth back to their luxurious Shadow Island estate.

"I won't stand in his way. I prefer, however, that he finish school and attend some good college or university."

The boy himself was proud of the work he did in Chicago as a salesman. After a hitch hike there, he alternately sold ice cream bars and magazine subscriptions. During his last two weeks, he explained, he made $20 and loaned $6 to a hotel roommate, who didn't pay it back.

The boy disappeared May 3 while supposedly on his way to keep a tennis engagement.

Theile returned from Chicago by plane after a long-distance conversation with his father.

Ohio Bar Members
Plan To Overhaul
Legal Machinery

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, June 3.—Members of the Ohio State Bar association set out today to overhaul Ohio's 83-year-old legal machinery.

A committee made up of leading lawyers will revise and modernize Ohio's laws on civil procedure along lines comparable with more progressive states and with a system now being worked out for federal courts by a committee appointed by the U. S. supreme court.

President Charles W. Racine of the Bar association named a 10 member committee "to rebuild the present inadequate system into one of efficiency and practicality for the lawyers and the public generally."

E. J. Marshall of Toledo was named chairman of the committee, composed of: Gustavus Ohlinger, Toledo; William B. Stewart, Cleveland; John Weld Peck, Cincinnati; Fred C. Rector, Columbus; Henry Bannan, Portsmouth; Nord, Cleveland; John D. Gardner, Steubenville, and William P. Barnum, Youngstown.

Bar association officials said they expected the task of making over the Ohio system to require two or three years.

MODESTO, Cal. — Federal registered workers have just established that this city owes its name to the modesty of William C. Ralston of the Bank of California. Residents wanted to name the town "Ralston" in honor of him, but as he modestly refused they compromised on Modesto.

Theater Attractions

Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael as enemy spies in "Till We Meet Again" showing at the State Thursday only.

"Till We Meet Again," to be shown at the State theater Thursday only, is a story of war, not of troops and battles but of the suffering brought to two people who were lovers until the war was declared, and then, because of different nationalities, found themselves on opposing sides.

Herbert Marshall and Gertrude Michael are the two happy lovers, both stars of the London stage, whose wedding plans are wrecked by the declaration of war. Marshall, as a loyal Englishman, joins up immediately and Miss Michael, who, unknown to her sweetheart, is a member of the German Secret Service, returns to her country to offer her services.

Faces Firing Squad Because of his knowledge of languages, Marshall is assigned to the British Intelligence service and enters Germany, disguised as a German soldier. Miss Michael, also in Germany, accidentally meets her lover and, realizing her love for him is greater than her love of her country, knows she can not betray him. Unconsciously however, she gives him away to the German authorities, as an English spy.

To save him from the firing squad she forgets her loyalty to her country and even risks death for herself. But these two, in a clever manner outwit the German agents and manage a thrilling escape.

Double Picture Ends The double feature at the State which will be shown tonight for the last times should prove very entertaining. "Champagne Charlie," a light comedy drama starring Paul Cavanaugh and Helen Wood, concerns a gambler and an heiress who fall in love in Monte Carlo. The gambler reforms but not until he has gone through several exciting escapades.

"Love Before Breakfast" presents Carole Lombard in a merry, sophisticated comedy romance with Preston Foster and Cesar Romero, her two leading men.

GRANGE MAKES
PLANK DEMAND

National Organization
Asks Recognition In Platforms

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, June 3.—Louis J. Aber, master of the National Grange, served notice today on both major political parties that his organization would demand recognition in the drafting of farm planks in the 1936 platforms.

The executive committee of the grange, Taber said, "will be on hand at both conventions this month and will ask for definite commitments in both Democratic and Republican platforms."

Taber said the executive committee would meet in Cleveland Monday to perfect a farm plank which will be offered to the Republican platform committee. Taber declined to comment upon suggestions under consideration for the plank.

However, other grange officials indicated the organization may outline a five-point plank.

This plank would demand the following assurances:

1—The American market for the American farmer.

2—A positive statement that no encouragement would be given to development of corporation farming, but that family farming would be fostered.

3—Conservation of natural resources, including preservation of soil fertility (grange officials indicated there might be some debate about endorsement of the present AAA soil conservation program in all its details).

4—Development of further industrial uses for farm products.

5—Repeal of the "reciprocal trade agreement act, and enactment of a provision requiring all trade agreements to go before the senate for ratification.

Five Candidates
Seek Governor's
Post In Florida

(By Associated Press)
JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 3.—Florida's 14-candidate race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination today became a five-man struggle for the two places in the runoff primary of June 23.

With about a third of Tuesday's votes counted, B. F. Paty of West Palm Beach led with slightly more than 18,000. Judge Raleigh W. Petteway of Tampa was about 3,000 behind the former racing commission chairman.

Bunched about 5,000 votes behind Petteway and within a few hundred votes of each other were Jerry W. Carter of Tallahassee, Dan Chappell of Miami, and William C. Hodges, state senate president from Tallahassee.

Joseph A. Coutremarsh, former Lebanon, N. H., dentist, received scattered votes in the presidential preference primary but his ballots and the large numbers marked for President Roosevelt were not tabulated since the state's 14 delegates to Philadelphia already have been instructed for the President.

Dead Sheep Valued
Higher Than Those
Alive, Claim States

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, June 3.—State Examiner Irving Young would like to know if a dead sheep is worth more than a live one.

In a report filed with the state bureau of accounting today he said that a sheep claim paid by Licking county to H. B. Ford, when compared with tax returns on Ford's sheep, indicated that a dead sheep was worth more.

Although making no findings for recovery, Examiner Young listed the following claim by Ford for sheep killed and injured by dogs: 32 ewes, killed, $160; one ram, killed, $10; and 27 ewes injured $67.50. The claim had been paid from the county dog and kennel fund.

"We find," the examiner said, "from H. B. Ford's personal tax return, filed March 19, 1935, he reported a total of 60 sheep for taxation at a value of $240, which, if they were the same sheep injured, would indicate that a dead sheep is worth more than a live one."
